

GRANDPARENTS' RIGHTS

In today's society, grandparents and other relatives frequently are involved in helping to raise young children. Sometimes, the circumstances that gave rise to that assistance change with the result that relatives who may have bonded with a child find themselves being excluded from the child's life. In those cases, the law allows certain relatives to seek visitation rights or even custody of a child. In other cases, a grandparent caring for a child may need temporary authority to obtain legal benefits or to make decisions on behalf of the child. In either case, we can help you determine the best way to make sure you and your child or grandchild are protected.
