

MODIFICATION OF CUSTODY AND VISITATION

Custody and visitation rights are always subject to modification if there is a major change in the circumstances involving a child's living conditions or either parent's ability to care for the child. If the parties are not able to agree upon a new parenting plan for the child, it may be necessary to obtain a court order to protect the child or one party's access to the child.